BIO

I am a physician-scientist in the Division of Gastroenterology at Stanford University. My clinical and research interest has been in neurogastroenterology. Specifically, my research has been exploring the interplay between immune cells and the enteric nervous system, and evaluating how perturbations of this interaction as a result of aging disrupts gastrointestinal neuromuscular function. Ultimately, my hope is that insights from this research provide novel therapies for treating patients with motility disorders like constipation and irritable bowel syndrome.

CLINICAL FOCUS

- Gastroenterology
- Neurogastroenterology

ACADEMIC APPOINTMENTS

- Assistant Professor - University Medical Line, Medicine - Gastroenterology & Hepatology

ADMINISTRATIVE APPOINTMENTS

- Assistant Professor of Medicine (Gastroenterology and Hepatology), Stanford University, (2021- present)
- Instructor in Medicine, Stanford University, (2009-2021)
- Clinical and Research Fellow in Gastroenterology, Beth Israel Deaconess, Harvard Medical School, (2005-2009)

HONORS AND AWARDS

- GEMSSTAR Scholar, NIA/NIH (2013-2015)
- Neurogastroenterology & Motility Distinguished Abstract Plenary, DDW (2013)
- Fellowship to Faculty Transition Award, AGA (2012)
- Albert Einstein College of Medicine Medical Scientist Training Program, MSTP (1994)
- Golden Key National Honor Society, University of California, Berkeley (1994)
- Phi Beta Kappa, University of California, Berkeley (1994)

BOARDS, ADVISORY COMMITTEES, PROFESSIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

- Member, American Gastroenterologic Association (2005 - present)

PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION

- Board Certification: Gastroenterology, American Board of Internal Medicine (2020)
- Medical Education: Albert Einstein College of Medicine (2002) NY
- Fellowship: Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center Dept of Gastroenterology (2009) MA
- Residency: Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center Internal Medicine Residency (2005) MA
