Before joining Stanford's faculty, he created a national healthcare performance improvement firm and co-founded three nationally influential public benefit initiatives, served as a Congressional MedPAC Commissioner, and was elected to the Institute of Medicine (IOM).

ACADEMIC APPOINTMENTS
• Professor, Medicine - Primary Care and Population Health

Research & Scholarship

CURRENT RESEARCH AND SCHOLARLY INTERESTS
Design and national demonstration of innovations in care delivery that provide more with less. Informed by research on AI-assisted clinical workflow, positive value outlier analysis and triggers of loss aversion bias among patients and clinicians.

Research on creation of a national index of health system productivity gain.
