Bio

Mark Whiting combines design and computation to build systems that augment our collective psychologies and philosophies. His research focuses on understanding how to improve decision making and coordination at individual, team and societal scales.

Research & Scholarship

CURRENT RESEARCH AND SCHOLARLY INTERESTS
The difficulty of making good creative decisions constrains human productivity. My work focuses on how we might make creative decisions in the future, with help from computational systems and models of human behavior, improving speed and reliability.