View all the services offered by Student and Academic Services.

Johanna has set forth a multi-year vision, which she is currently leading, to improve the student experience, and enable students seamless navigation of their academic journey at Stanford.

Career Experience

Before joining Stanford, she served as associate registrar at the University of California, Berkeley, a role she held since 2006. She brought to Stanford more than 20 years of combined experience in student services at Cal as well as Columbia University, where she worked for 10 years in numerous roles, including associate director for the institution’s Division of Student Services and acting executive director of student services at Columbia’s Medical School. She also served as an associate registrar, assistant registrar, and financial aid officer at Columbia.

In her previous roles, Johanna streamlined and improved a wide range of academic and administrative processes, including billing, third-party payments, grading, transcript fulfillment, course approval, catalog production, class scheduling, enrollment management, degree audit and graduation checkout. She has demonstrated a deep commitment to students by creating systems that have transformed the ways students explore courses and design their academic paths.

Education

Johanna earned a master’s degree in public administration from Columbia and holds a bachelor’s degree in communications with a minor in journalism from San Francisco State University.
