BIO

Julie Chen, MD, is a board-certified endocrinologist and a Clinical Associate Professor in the Division of Endocrinology at Stanford University. Dr. Chen diagnoses and treats a wide range of conditions with a focus on thyroid and thyroid cancer. She also works closely with cancer specialists to treat the endocrine side effects associated with cancer treatments, such as immunotherapy. Dr. Chen views her relationship with each patient as a partnership and develops a personalized care plan for each one. Dr. Chen is committed to helping patients achieve the best possible outcomes through comprehensive treatment.

Dr. Chen is also passionate about medical education and mentoring. She currently serves as the Program Director for the Endocrinology Fellowship Program at Stanford University. She has given numerous lectures to medical students, residents, and fellows.

Dr. Chen has held numerous leadership roles in national professional organizations, including the American Thyroid Association (ATA), the Association of Program Directors in Diabetes, Endocrinology, and Metabolism (APDEM), and the Endocrine Society.
