Amina Ly
Ph.D. Student in Earth System Science, admitted Autumn 2018

Bio

Amina is a PhD student in the Earth Systems Science Department at Stanford University. Her work is primarily focused on understanding climate change risks, and the impacts of extreme temperatures on human systems. Her current work explores the influence of extreme heat events on small-scale mobility patterns, as well as global mapping projects of protected mountainous biodiversity hotspots.