Dr. Ramsudha Narala is a board certified ophthalmologist who specializes in vitreoretinal surgery and ocular oncology. Dr. Narala attended the 8 year combined undergraduate-medical school program at Saint Louis University in Saint Louis, Missouri. After medical school, she completed her ophthalmology residency at Kresge Eye Institute in Detroit, MI, where she received the best resident teacher award and highest resident ophthalmic knowledge assessment program exam score award. She then joined the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, California for a 2 year vitreoretinal surgery fellowship where she was elected chief vitreoretinal surgery fellow. Following completion of vitreoretinal surgery fellowship, she pursued an advanced training fellowship in ocular oncology at Byers Eye Institute at Stanford University.

Dr. Narala has authored many peer-reviewed scientific publications and textbook chapters on vitreoretinal diseases and ocular oncology and has been invited to speak at many national conferences. She is also dedicated to education and teaching medical students, residents, and fellows. She serves on many academic committees and is one of the current associate program directors for the Stanford ophthalmology residency training program.

Dr. Narala's clinical practice is mainly based at Santa Clara Valley Medical Center.
