Stanford

Ingrid Anderson

Director, Transfer Academic Programs, Academic Advising Operations

Bio

BIO

Dr. Ingrid Anderson, Director of Transfer Academic Programs at Stanford University, supports all undergraduate transfer students, from their transition and integration into Stanford's academic community until their graduation, through direct advising, nurturing campus connections, and program development.

Ingrid joined the Academic Advising team at Stanford in 2021 as a Residential Undergraduate Advising Director, and she has collaborated with numerous campus teams actively working toward making campus a welcoming place for all students and supporting their wellbeing.

Before coming to Stanford, Ingrid was an Assistant Dean & Academic Coordinator at Washington University in St. Louis, where she also earned master's and doctorate degrees in political science. Additionally, Ingrid holds degrees in public policy and psychology from the University of Michigan, and has work experience in federal, state, and local government.