BIO

Mark Choa, MD, is a psychiatrist specializing in the care of undergraduate and graduate students. He has worked in a variety of community agencies and student health programs that center college and transition-aged young people. At Stanford, he leads the teaching clinic associated with the Student Mental Health fellowship, and works with the School of Medicine Mental Health Team to provide psychiatric care to Stanford medical students, Biosciences grad students, and MSPA students. Dr. Choa has completed additional training in psychoanalysis, and he integrates psychotherapy into his work with students. He has experience working with students with a variety of diagnoses, including psychotic disorders and severe mood disorders.
