Senior Communications & Engagement Manager, SCALE, SAL Policy

Julie Brosnan, a lover of all things education and communications, is the Communications & Engagement Manager for the National Student Support Accelerator program at Stanford Graduate School of Education. Prior to joining NSSA in 2023, Julie worked in communications for both Whiteboard Advisors, a DC-based education consultancy, and the think tank New America with their Education Policy Program. In all her roles, she has supported outreach, engagement, and messaging strategies to ensure that new and important education research is being heard and understood by the right leaders across the country.

Also in Julie's suite of past experience, she worked for both a tutoring company and a social-emotional learning program in New Zealand, aiding their communications portfolios while working with hundreds of students in schools across New Zealand. She also worked for a communications firm in the Washington, DC area, focusing on education and health initiatives, including with Sesame Street Workshop.

Julie earned a BA in political communication from The George Washington University, during which time she worked with Sen. Barbara A. Mikulski (D-MD), the Chronicle of Higher Education, and the American Association of University Women Lobby Corps. She loves all things New Zealand, Maryland, and bird-related.
