Felicia A. Smith, MLIS, is the inaugural Racial Justice and Social Equity Librarian at Stanford University Libraries. She is responsible for outreach to faculty and students across all schools and departments including the Department of African and African American Studies (DAAAS), and Stanford Center for Racial Justice (SCRJ), as well as the Equity, Community, Leadership (ECL) centers.

Felicia is also the Communication & Journalism Librarian who serves as the primary liaison between the library and those academic departments, programs, faculty and students. She is the library liaison for Stanford's Big Local News Project and the Black Graphic Design History Collections.

Felicia is responsible for collection development of research materials in all formats including data sources that support the research and teaching needs of Stanford scholars and that expand the breadth of Stanford's collections.

Felicia believes that as a librarian, she is charged with the awesome responsibility of being a keeper of the light and protector of our shared memories. In addition to her numerous national and international presentations, Felicia has published several peer-reviewed articles as well as a book, Cybrarian Extraordinaire, detailing her highly successful and unique approach to library instruction. Felicia created a program that taught Information Literacy using Kindles for inmates in a Juvenile Jail. Previously, Felicia was as a Criminal Defense Private Investigator in Chicago, Illinois, specializing in homicide and narcotics. Her motto is, "I make the unknown, known."

Felicia received a Master of Library Science degree, from Dominican University and a Bachelor of Arts in Communications from the University of Illinois at Chicago. Her past positions include serving as the Latino Studies Subject Specialist as an Assistant Librarian, at the University of Notre Dame.
