

Stanford

(Alex) Alexandra Ward

Clinical Research Coordinator Associate, Pediatrics - Endocrinology

Bio

BIO

(Alex) Alexandra Ward is currently a Clinical Research Coordinator at Stanford School of Medicine in the Department of Pediatric Endocrinology. She holds a Bachelor's degree in Sociology from UC Berkeley and has a strong interest in the intersection of medicine and social science. Alexandra is particularly passionate about advancing health equity and studying the social determinants of health. Her experience spans clinical work, academic research, and community engagement.

EDUCATION AND CERTIFICATIONS

- BA, UC Berkeley (2024)

LINKS

- LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/aljaw/>

Professional

SKILLS AND EXPERTISE

Administrative Operations

- Communication
- Microsoft Office
- Public Speaking
- Team Building

Information Technology

- Artificial Intelligence (AI)
- Data Management
- Health Care
- Project Management
- Research Administration
- Research Data

Publications

PUBLICATIONS

- "All my food is customized*": Barriers & facilitators concerning nutrition for persons living with cystic fibrosis. Journal of cystic fibrosis : official journal of the European Cystic Fibrosis Society
Bruce, A. S., Suttiratana, S. C., Grabowski, H., Sweeney, L., Ward, A., Mazuera, S., Alvarez, J. A., Yablon, D., Naranjo, D.
2025

PRESENTATIONS

- A Scoping Review of Social Isolation and Alzheimer's Disease and Dementia - Annual Biomedical Research Conference for Minoritized Scientists (ABRCMS)
- The Co-Construction of Gender and Autism in Scientific Discourse - American Sociological Alliance (ASA)
- A Systematic Review of Contemporary Literature: An Analysis of Social Determinants of Health and Their Impact on Global Healthcare Delivery Systems - Honors Program, American Sociological Alliance (ASA)