BIO

Matthew (Matt) Hernandez, MD, PhD, D(ABMM) is an Assistant Professor of Pathology at Stanford University and an Associate Director of the Clinical Microbiology and Clinical Virology Laboratories at Stanford Health Care. He received his ScB in Biochemistry and Molecular Biology from Brown University and his MD/PhD from the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai, where he also completed residency training in Clinical Pathology and served as Chief Resident. He completed his fellowship in Medical and Public Health Microbiology at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and Harvard Medical School. He is board certified in Clinical Pathology and Medical and Public Health Microbiology.

His clinical work focuses on the evaluation, implementation, and development of infectious disease testing, including novel serologic assays to diagnose and stage distinct infections. His research integrates clinical data, microbial genomics, and systems-level approaches organized around three areas: (1) pathogen-host interactions driving evolution and virulence, (2) using serologic and genomic data to characterize microbial diversity, spread, and pathogenesis, and (3) linking pathogen diversity to diagnostic performance to optimize testing strategies. Current projects include characterizing the patho-genomic diversity of clinical Aeromonas infections, defining the true burden of Hepatitis D Virus in the United States, evaluating syphilis testing algorithms, investigating the role of anaerobes in pilonidal disease outcomes in pediatric patients, and expanding surveillance for emerging pathogens.

He is an active member of the American Society for Microbiology and the American Society for Clinical Pathology, recognized as one of the Top 5 of the ASCP 40 Under Forty and elected to Alpha Omega Alpha. He is committed to mentoring the next generation of physician-scientists and laboratory medicine leaders.
