

Stanford

Belle Long

Communications Associate, Woods Institute

Bio

BIO

Belle Long is a Communications Associate at the Woods Institute, where she develops editorial, social media, video, website, and other content that connects environmental and sustainability research to action. She specializes in strategic communications and multimedia storytelling to engage diverse audiences and amplify the impact of environmental research.

Before joining the Woods Institute, Belle was a founding member of the marketing team at a Series B cellular agriculture startup, helping launch the company's flagship product. She also gained experience in business journalism as an editorial intern at Forbes, contributing to the Forbes Billionaires List, and worked on brand marketing initiatives as an intern at Mailchimp.

Belle holds a B.A. in Political Science and Journalism from The George Washington University, where she graduated in 2022.

CURRENT ROLE AT STANFORD

Communications Associate, Stanford Woods Institute for the Environment