BIO

Dr. Jiang is a board-certified gastroenterologist and pancreatologist. Her clinical interests include chronic abdominal pain, acute and chronic pancreatitis, pancreatic cysts, exocrine pancreatic insufficiency, and pancreatic cancer screening. She is committed to delivering evidence-based, personalized care focused on optimizing outcomes and improving quality of life.

Dr. Jiang has a particular interest in chronic pancreatitis and completed dedicated fellowship training in medical pancreatology under the mentorship of Dr. Stephen Pandol, a leading expert in the field. Her work emphasizes multidisciplinary care, and she is actively involved in clinical trials investigating innovative approaches such as novel nutritional therapies and digital health interventions. Her research has been published in Gastroenterology, Gut, Clinical Gastroenterology and Hepatology, Frontiers in Physiology, Pancreas, and Cancers. She served as an abstract reviewer and moderator for the Pancreatitis session at Digestive Disease Week, one of the leading national conferences in the field of gastroenterology. She currently serves as a topic editor for the journal Frontiers in Physiology research collections: "Pain Mechanisms: The Drivers of Quality of Life in Patients with Gastrointestinal Disorders" and "Pancreatitis as a Neural Circuit Disorder: Nociceptor Sensitization, Glial Activation, and Non-Opioid Therapeutic Targets".

CLINICAL FOCUS

- Gastroenterology
- Pancreatology
- Chronic Pancreatitis
- Acute Pancreatitis
- Pancreatic Cancer Screening
- Exocrine Pancreatic Insufficiency
- Pancreatic Cysts
- Chronic Abdominal Pain
