

Katie Rozzell-Voss

Postdoctoral Scholar, Psychiatry

Bio

BIO

Katie received her PhD in Clinical Psychology from the University of Hawai'i at Manoa. She completed her predoctoral clinical psychology internship at the University of California, San Diego, where she worked at the UCSD Eating Disorder Center for Treatment and Research and Rady Children's Hospital. Katie's research interests focus on the impact of body image distress and internalized weight bias on disordered eating and other health behaviors, measurement invariance of eating disorder assessments across diverse populations, and neuroendocrinological risk factors of eating disorders. She currently works as a postdoctoral fellow in the Eating Disorders Clinic and Student Athlete Mental Health Clinic at Stanford.

PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION

- PhD, University of Hawai'i at Manoa , Clinical Psychology (2025)
- MA, San Diego State University , Psychology
- BS, Utah State University , Psychology

STANFORD ADVISORS

- Norah Simpson, Postdoctoral Faculty Sponsor