

Mario Martinez-Jimenez

- Affiliate, Health Policy
- Visiting Postdoctoral Scholar, Health Policy

Bio

BIO

Mario Martínez-Jiménez is a Visiting Postdoctoral Scholar in the Department of Health Policy at Stanford Medicine, hosted by Dr. Maya Rossin-Slater. He is an applied microeconomist whose research focuses on the economics of child development and human capital formation, with an emphasis on how early-life conditions and policy shape long-run outcomes.

Mario's primary affiliation is with the Department of Economics & Public Policy at Imperial College Business School, where he is an Imperial College Research Fellow.

He received his PhD in Economics of Health from Lancaster University. He also has a Bachelor of Science in Economics from the Pompeu Fabra University (UPF), a Master of Science in Health Economics from the Erasmus University Rotterdam (EUR), and a Master of Research in Applied Economics from the Autonomous University of Barcelona (UAB).

SU email: mmarjim3@stanford.edu