

Stanford

Savanna Elizabeth Stromberg

Associate Project Coordinator, Psych/Public Mental Health & Population Sciences

Bio

BIO

Savanna Stromberg, BS, is an Associate Project Coordinator at Stanford CDI, who will be working across projects on C-DIAS, CMHIS, and RASC. She recently received her BS in Psychology from the University of Washington, where she conducted research on trauma and mental health outcomes in the Honors Psychology program. With a strong interest in substance use interventions and mental health, Savanna is eager to expand her expertise in implementation research. At Stanford CDI, Savanna supports multi-project management, helps build and organize data, and assists with the development, communication, and design of research findings to internal and external audiences.

Publications

PUBLICATIONS

- Posttraumatic stress disorder and climate change: A meta-analysis of prospective, acute predictors of PTSD following extreme weather events CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGY REVIEW
Gauthier, G. M., Pandey, S., Sanchez, V., Stromberg, S. E., Zoellner, L. A.
2025; 122: 102662