Valerie Moss is the Assistant Director of Student Services for E-IPER. Prior to her position at Stanford, she served as Assistant Director of Student Affairs for the Master of Development Engineering (MDevEng) and Global Poverty and Practice (GPP) programs. In that role, she advised students, supported the master's admissions process, and helped plan events for students and the broader campus community. Valerie earned her B.A. in Cognitive Science and Psychology from the University of California, Merced, and her M.S.Ed in Education Policy from the University of Pennsylvania. Through her educational journey and professional experience, Valerie has explored how interdisciplinary education, race, and financial support intersect to shape the student experience and postsecondary outcomes.

Outside of work, Valerie is reconnecting with her creative side through coloring, acrylic painting, and interior design. She also loves exploring new cuisines, which often leads her to cook far more food than a two-person household can handle.
