BIO

I am a Venezuelan medical student at the University of Bologna with a developing interest in oncology and academic medicine. My work has included oncology-focused literature synthesis and retrospective clinical research, while my clinical experiences have shown me how much strong cancer care depends on preparation, multidisciplinary judgment, and thoughtful follow-through. Training across different academic settings has made me adaptable, attentive, and comfortable contributing wherever I can add value. I hope to build a career that brings together patient care, research, and teaching.
