BIO

Peter Acker is a Clinical Associate Professor in the Department of Emergency Medicine at the Stanford University School of Medicine. Dr. Acker holds an MD and an MPH from the Tufts University School of Medicine in Boston, Massachusetts, USA. He completed his emergency medicine training at the University of Chicago, where he served as chief resident. He completed a fellowship in International Emergency Medicine at Stanford University. He currently holds the rank of Clinical Associate Professor in the Department of Emergency Medicine and is a Faculty Fellow with the Center for Innovation in Global Health (CIGH) at Stanford University School of Medicine.

Dr. Acker's academic work in global health has focused on strengthening health systems, particularly emergency referral systems, to increase access to emergency care for vulnerable populations, including mothers and newborns. He has explored this work in many countries, with a focus in South and Southeast Asia as well as Sub-Saharan Africa, working to improve health facility's abilities to identify sick patients, coordinate safe and effective transport and improve the emergency care they receive upon arriving at a definitive care location. He has also worked extensively with the GVK EMRI ambulance service in India, currently the world's largest prehospital care system, and the Nepal Ambulance Service to increase the quality and reach of prehospital care and effective emergency referral systems in both of these regions. He is currently involved in a number of efforts focused in improving the measurement and effectiveness of emergency referral systems, supporting the revision of the Averting Maternal Death and Disability tool. Most recently he has been working to create new partnerships in Sri Lanka to better understand current patterns of road traffic accident injuries and outcomes and how existing prehospital care and emergency care resources can be leveraged to optimize outcomes.

CLINICAL FOCUS

- Emergency Medicine
- Global Health
- Health System Strengthening
- Maternal and Child Health
- Emergency Referral Systems
- Maternal and Obstetric Emergencies
- Medical Education

- Prehospital Emergency Care
- Emergency Ultrasonography

ACADEMIC APPOINTMENTS

- Clinical Associate Professor, Emergency Medicine
- Member, Maternal & Child Health Research Institute (MCHRI)

ADMINISTRATIVE APPOINTMENTS

- Alternate, Stanford Clinical Assistant Professor Appointments And Promotions Committee, (2024- present)
- Editorial Board Member, The Sri Lanka Journal of Trauma, (2024- present)

Research & Scholarship

CURRENT RESEARCH AND SCHOLARLY INTERESTS

My research and work focus on optimizing the use of health system data to create intelligent and accurate emergency referral systems to ensure vulnerable populations receive the care they require as efficiently as possible. I am interested in increasing our understanding of currently available health infrastructure in resource limited settings, and pairing that knowledge with technology tools to help identify patient's true needs and match those needs with health system capacity in real-time.

PROJECTS

- USAID Quality Health Services project in Cambodia - Stanford University, University Research Consortium (8/1/2013 - present)

- Stanford Essential Prehospital Care Course - Stanford University, University Research Consortium
- Prehospital Care Provider Training and Mobile Decision Aid Application Creation
- Saving Mother's and Infant's Lives via Emergency Care (SMILE) - Stanford University Department of Emergency Medicine and GVK Emergency Research and Management Institute, India (8/15/2019)
- Prehospital Maternal Emergency Obstetric Warning Score Development - Stanford University Department of Emergency Medicine (June 1, 2021 - present)
