Bio

MarYam Hamedani, Ph.D., studies and puts into practice strategies to help people learn about race, social class, and other forms of difference. As managing director and senior research scientist at Stanford SPARQ: Social Psychological Answers to Real-world Questions, she leads projects on reducing racial bias in policing, improving racial literacy, educating people about difference, and fostering inclusive, empowering schools and classrooms. The former associate director of Stanford’s Center for Comparative Studies in Race and Ethnicity (CCSRE) and the Stanford Center for Opportunity Policy in Education (SCOPE), she is also a Stanford Ph.D. alum in psychology.

ACADEMIC APPOINTMENTS

- Sr Research Scholar, Psychology

ADMINISTRATIVE APPOINTMENTS

- Managing Director & Senior Research Scientist, Stanford SPARQ, (2018- present)