I am a PhD student in the Institute for Computational and Mathematical Engineering (ICME). Prior to joining the Stanford community, I worked at NERA Economic Consulting in New York, where I specialized in data work with applications to antitrust litigation and mergers. I am originally from the DC area and received my Bachelor's in Mathematics with Computer Science from MIT. Previous internships include data science roles at Facebook, Google, and Microsoft.