BIO

Sharon Hung MD, FACP is a board-certified Internal Medicine physician practicing at the Stanford Internal Medicine Clinic in Santa Clara. She earned her MD from the Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine and completed her internal medicine residency at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. Prior to joining Stanford, she served on the faculty at the University of Arizona College of Medicine.

Dr. Hung is the Director of Women's Health for the Department of Primary Care and Population Health. In this role, she served as course director for Stanford CME's Women's Health Conference and continues to co-direct the annual Stanford CME Menopause and Healthy Aging Conference. She also hosts the Stanford CME/YouTube Women's Health Vodcast, where she interviews leading experts and explores timely, clinically relevant topics in women's health.

Her scholarly interests include breast cancer screening, steatotic liver disease, osteoporosis, and weight gain during the perimenopausal period. Clinically, she is dedicated to preventive medicine and the management of chronic conditions such as pre-diabetes, obesity and metabolic syndrome, as well as guiding women through the perimenopausal transition. Dr. Hung also leads bi-monthly group patient visits focused on the prevention and treatment of osteoporosis. She is passionate about inspiring trainees and works with both Stanford Internal Medicine residents and Physician Assistant students.

She is conversational in both Spanish and Mandarin.
