

Arghavan Salles

- Scholar in Residence, School of Medicine - Educational Programs and Services (EPS)
- Staff, SoM - Admissions
- Temp - Non-Exempt, SoM - Admissions

Bio

BIO

Dr. Salles is a minimally invasive and bariatric surgeon. She completed medical school and residency in general surgery at Stanford prior to completing her fellowship in minimally invasive surgery at Washington University in St. Louis. She stayed on faculty at Washington University for three years prior to moving back to Stanford. Dr. Salles obtained a PhD in education from Stanford University during her residency training, and her research focuses on gender equity, implicit bias, diversity, inclusion, and physician well-being. She is a sought-after speaker and has given over 40 national and international invited talks related to gender equity, physician well-being, and weight bias.