BIO

Dr. Htet is a fellow physician of Critical Care Medicine. She earned her undergraduate degree in Biochemistry and Neuroscience at University of California Los Angeles (UCLA) and her masters degree in Physiological Science at UCLA. She received her M.D. degree from the University of Wisconsin School of Medicine and Public Health. During medical school, she was a part of leadership team for free clinics in the area, and performed research in the field of neuroimaging concurrent with her interest in undergraduate and graduate studies. She did her residency in Emergency Medicine at Advocate Christ Medical Center in Oak Lawn, near Chicago. During residency, she continued her interest in research and teaching, and was selected to be a chief resident. She was involved in national emergency medicine organizations and mentor groups. She started her fellowship training in Critical Care Medicine at Stanford in 2016 and works in intensive care units at Stanford, Veteran Affairs Hospital in Palo Alto, and Santa Clara Valley hospital. Her career interests involve teaching, palliative care, new models of improving patient education, and continued research in hemodynamic monitoring and neurocritical care.
