

Stanford

Ashley Elaine Rawls

- Clinical Instructor, Neurology & Neurological Sciences
- Postdoctoral Research Fellow, Neurology and Neurological Sciences

Bio

BIO

Dr. Ashley Rawls received her bachelor's degree in Biology at Duke University. Subsequently, she earned a master's degree in Medical Sciences with a concentration in Aging and Neuroscience at the University of South Florida Morsani College of Medicine. She went on to obtain her medical degree from the University of Florida College of Medicine. She completed neurology residency at the Medical University of South Carolina, where she was appointed neurology Chief Resident. Dr. Rawls is currently training in the Stanford University Movement Disorders fellowship program, and hopes to continue to pursue her interests in global health and medical education.

ACADEMIC APPOINTMENTS

- Clinical Instructor, Neurology & Neurological Sciences

STANFORD ADVISORS

- Helen Bronte-Stewart, Postdoctoral Faculty Sponsor