

Stanford

Sara Godin

Collections Technician, Archaeology

Bio

BIO

Sara Godin is a Collections Technician at Stanford University Archaeology Collections. She has a BS in Anthropology/Sociology and Education from Elmira College, and a MA in Museum Studies from San Francisco State University, where she focused on the connection preservation and access through her thesis of collections and YouTube. During her time at SFSU, she assisted with the opening, installation, and curation of the new campus museum, the Global Museum, and their inaugural exhibit, Going Global. Before coming to SUAC, she has worked with a wide variety of museum collections, including the National Park Service and the California Academy of Sciences. Her interests outside of collections include museum education and social media for museum engagement.