

Stanford

Carina Thompson

Undergraduate Advising Director, Student-Athletes, Academic Advising Operations

Bio

BIO

Carina works as an Academic Advisor for Student-Athletes in the Athletic Academic Resource Center. Prior to joining the Office of Academic Advising at Stanford University, she was a Student-Athlete Development Coordinator at Northern Arizona University. Originally from Hawai'i, Carina was a Division I volleyball player at Fordham University where she pursued a Bachelors of Science in Psychology. She then earned a Masters of Science in Sport Psychology from Florida State University. Carina enjoys working with student-athletes as they navigate their college experience to become lifelong learners.

CURRENT ROLE AT STANFORD

Undergraduate Advising Director, Student-Athletes