BIO

Shivali started her role as a Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the Stanford University Department of Dermatology in September 2020. She grew up in Leicestershire, England. She graduated from Cardiff University School of Medicine in 2017, and has a BSc (Honours) in Medical Genetics. After graduation, she completed a two-year academic internship program with the University Hospitals of Leicester, England. Following this, she was selected for a national medical leadership fellowship and worked as an Editor at The BMJ from 2019-20. Whilst at medical school, she co-founded The British Student Doctor Journal, a novel peer-reviewed journal to educate and train medical students in editorial work, peer review and publishing. The journal is a publication of The Foundation for Medical Publishing, and Shivali now serves as an Executive Director and Trustee of this organization.
