

Stanford

Alina Bykova

Ph.D. Student in History, admitted Autumn 2020

 Curriculum Vitae available Online

Bio

BIO

Alina is a PhD candidate in Russian and East European History. Her research interests include Arctic and Soviet environmental history with a focus on energy and industry. Alina is writing her dissertation on the history of energy and extraction on Svalbard, Norway. She also works as a research associate and editor-in-chief at The Arctic Institute, an interdisciplinary think tank.

Alina earned her masters in European and Russian Affairs from the Munk School of Global Affairs and Public Policy at the University of Toronto in 2019. Her masters thesis was about the rise and fall of Soviet mining settlements on Svalbard. Prior to her work in academia, she completed a Bachelor of Journalism at Ryerson University and worked as a breaking news reporter at the Toronto Star, Canada's largest newspaper.

EDUCATION AND CERTIFICATIONS

- BJourn, Ryerson University , Journalism (2017)
- MA, University of Toronto , European and Russian Affairs (2019)

LINKS

- The Arctic Institute: <https://www.thearcticinstitute.org/experts/alina-bykova/>
- Twitter: <https://twitter.com/alinaobykova>

Teaching

COURSES

2022-23

- An Environmental Problem: Energy, Pollution, Catastrophe: HISTORY 6S (Win)

Publications

PUBLICATIONS

- Once Upon the Permafrost: Knowing Culture and Climate Change in Siberia (Book Review) ENVIRONMENTAL HISTORY
Book Review Authored by: Bykova, A.
2023: 415-+