

Stanford

Haifa Badi Uz Zaman

Program Manager for Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion, Institute for Human-Centered Artificial Intelligence (HAI)

Bio

BIO

Haifa Badi-Uz-Zaman is Program Manager for Diversity, Equity and Inclusion at the Stanford Institute for Human-Centered Artificial Intelligence, where she leads the institute's education initiatives that include courses, fellowships, and convenings related to race and technology, arts and technology, AI education for K-12 audiences, and AI in global contexts. She is passionate about centering perspectives from minoritized communities in technology design and application, particularly voices from developing countries in Asia and Africa.

Haifa has a master's degree in international education policy from the Harvard Graduate School of Education, a bachelor's degree in mass communication from the American University of Sharjah and has previously worked at the Stanford Cyber Policy Center, the Center on Philanthropy and Civil Society, Citizen Schools, and the Aga Khan Development Network.