Stanford

Kyna Byrd

Life Science Rsch Prof 1, Comparative Medicine - Veterinary Service Center

SUPERVISORS

- Joseph Garner

Bio

BIO

Kyna (pronounced kee-nuh) Byrd has a Masters in Laboratory Animal Science from Stanford University and is the Animal Welfare Specialist for the Veterinarian Service Center, as well as a part of the rodent breeding colony management team. Their research focus is on animal behavior and welfare, and refining the ways we care for biomedical research animals to improve experimental translation and reproducibility.

Kyna is a certified Laboratory Animal Technologist (RLATG) and has over a decade of animal husbandry experience with countless species in biomedical research, zoos, wildlife rehabilitation, and animal shelters, as well as many years of teaching and public speaking experience.