

Mikaela Spruill

Postdoctoral Scholar, Psychology

 Curriculum Vitae available Online

Bio

BIO

Mikaela Spruill's research investigates how our judgments and decisions at the individual-level sustain systemic inequities. She works to understand the cognitive processes and social contexts that help facilitate large-scale racial disparities via policy preferences and legal decision-making. She is the Criminal Justice Postdoctoral Fellow with SPARQ at Stanford where she aids in the advancement of the center's projects on the criminal justice system, with a focus on policing and public safety. Additionally, she serves as an editorial fellow for Psychology, Public Policy & Law.

PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION

- Doctor of Philosophy, Cornell University (2023)
- Master of Arts, Cornell University (2021)
- Master of Arts, Wake Forest University (2018)
- Bachelor of Science, College of William and Mary (2016)
- Ph.D., Cornell University , Psychology (2023)
- M.A., Cornell University , Psychology (2021)
- M.A., Wake Forest University , Experimental Psychology (2018)
- B.S., The College of William & Mary , Neuroscience (2016)

STANFORD ADVISORS

- Jennifer Eberhardt, Postdoctoral Faculty Sponsor