

Stanford

Timothy Noakes

Head of Public Services, Special Collections

Bio

BIO

I grew up in Florida and Maryland before attending the University of Notre Dame. After graduation I moved to Stanford to work as the Stanford University Novice Rowing Coach. Decided to pursue competitive cycling and was invited to the Olympic Camp as well as qualifying for the Olympic Trials. Awarded a Master's Degree at Stanford University in 2013 for my work on a World War I poet by the name of David Jones. My academic interests are World War I history and literature.

CURRENT ROLE AT STANFORD

Head of the Public Services Department, Special Collections

EDUCATION AND CERTIFICATIONS

- Masters, Stanford University , Masters of Liberal Arts (2013)
- B.A., University of Notre Dame , Program of Liberal Studies (1987)