

Stanford

Richard Bahr

Adjunct Professor, Electrical Engineering

Bio

BIO

Academic experience:

Presently advising the Stanford SystemX Alliance, and the EE/CS AHA! Research center as an adjunct prof. Formerly the executive director of the SystemX Alliance, and a consulting professor at Stanford.

Commercial experience:

Presently an advisor, consultant and mentor to a number of startup companies primarily in the computing and wireless spaces. Formerly the SrVP responsible for Wi-Fi technology at Qualcomm, and before that the engineering executive responsible for the MIPS microprocessor and Cray supercomputer development at SGI.

Education: BSEE and MSEE from MIT.

For more extensive background, please consult my linked in profile: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/rickbahr>.