

Stanford

Emilee Chapman

Assistant Professor of Political Science

 Curriculum Vitae available Online

Bio

BIO

Emilee is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at Stanford. Her current research project examines the distinctive value of voting in contemporary democratic practice, and its significance for electoral reform and the ethics of participation.

ACADEMIC APPOINTMENTS

- Assistant Professor, Political Science

Teaching

COURSES

2021-22

- Citizenship in the 21st Century: COLLEGE 102 (Win)
- Ethics for Activists: ETHICSOC 134, POLISCI 134 (Win)

2020-21

- 20th Century and Contemporary Political Theory: POLISCI 437C (Aut)
- Citizenship in the 21st Century: THINK 71 (Win)
- The Ethics of Elections: ETHICSOC 134R, POLISCI 132A (Win)

2019-20

- 20th Century and Contemporary Political Theory: POLISCI 437C (Aut)
- Education as Self-Fashioning: The Democratic Citizen: ESF 11 (Aut)
- Education as Self-Fashioning: The Democratic Citizen: ESF 11A (Aut)
- Ethics for Activists: ETHICSOC 134, POLISCI 134 (Win)

2018-19

- 20th Century and Contemporary Political Theory: POLISCI 437C (Aut)
- Honors Thesis Seminar: POLISCI 299B (Aut)
- The Ethics of Elections: ETHICSOC 134R, POLISCI 132A (Win)

STANFORD ADVISEES

Doctoral (Program)

Joan O'Bryan, Natasha Patel

Publications

PUBLICATIONS

- The Distinctive Value of Elections and the Case for Compulsory Voting AMERICAN JOURNAL OF POLITICAL SCIENCE
Chapman, E.
2019; 63 (1): 101–12