BIO

My scholarly research over the past 25 years has focused on understanding autistic symptoms in children with neurogenetic disorders such as fragile X syndrome, Cornelia de Lange syndrome and Prader-Willi syndrome to determine how environmental and biological factors affect the development of these behaviors, toward the goal of creating patient-specific treatments. My investigations include state-of-the-art eye tracking, functional assessments of behavior under controlled experimental conditions, neuroimaging, and novel behavioral and pharmacological interventions. I am extensively trained in behavioral assessment and interventions, and provide clinical evaluations and consultation as a doctoral-level Board Certified Behavior Analyst (BCBA-D). Given that many children and families experience difficulties accessing in-person care, I am particularly interested in developing targeted treatments that can be delivered via telehealth.

ACADEMIC APPOINTMENTS

- Professor - University Medical Line, Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences - Interdisciplinary Brain Sciences
- Member, Maternal & Child Health Research Institute (MCHRI)
- Member, Wu Tsai Neurosciences Institute

ADMINISTRATIVE APPOINTMENTS

- Editorial Board, Journal of Intellectual Disability Research, (2019- present)
- Associate Editor, American Journal on Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities, (2022- present)

HONORS AND AWARDS

- Telehealth-Enabled Versus In-Person Parent-Mediated Behavioral Treatment in Autism Spectrum Disorder, Department of Defense (2022-2026)
- Treatment of Disruptive Behaviors in Fragile X Syndrome, John Merck Fund Developmental Disabilities Translational Research Program (2016-2020)
- Effects of Social Gaze Training on Brain and Behavior in Fragile X Syndrome (R01), NICHD (2015-2020)
- Understanding Severe Disruptive Behaviors in Adolescents with Fragile X Syndrome (R21), NICHD (2013-2015)
- Neural Correlates of Skin Picking in Children with Prader-Willi Syndrome, Child Health Research Institute, Stanford University (2013-2014)
- Environmental, Physiological and Neural Correlates of Skin-Picking in Prader-Willi Syndrome, Foundation for Prader-Willi Research (2011-2012)
- Evaluating an Intensive Behavioral Intervention for Children with Fragile X Syndrome (K08), NIMH (2008-2013)
- Teaching Math and Money Skills to Children with Fragile X Syndrome, National Fragile X Foundation (2007-2009)

BOARDS, ADVISORY COMMITTEES, PROFESSIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

- BCBA-D, Behavior Analyst Certification Board (2002 - present)

PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION

- B.Sc., Goldsmiths' College, University of London, England , Psychology (1989)
- Ph.D., Institute of Psychiatry, King's College, University of London, England , Psychology (1997)
- Postdoctoral Fellowship, Department of Psychology, Arizona State University , Behavior Analysis (1999)
- Postdoctoral Fellowship, University of Birmingham, England , Neurogenetic Disorders (2000)

Research & Scholarship

CURRENT RESEARCH AND SCHOLARLY INTERESTS

My primary area of scholarly and clinical interest is the pathogenesis of problem behaviors shown by individuals diagnosed with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD), particularly those with neurogenetic forms of IDD, such as fragile X syndrome, Cornelia de Lange syndrome and Prader-Willi syndrome. My work aims to both advance understanding of these disorders and to identify effective new treatment approaches for pediatric and adult patient populations by state-of-the-art methodologies, such as brain imaging, eye tracking and functional analysis to determine how environmental and biological factors affect the development of aberrant behaviors in these syndromes. The end goal of my research is to create patient-specific methods for treating the symptoms of these disorders.
