

Steven L. Frick, M.D.

Pediatric Orthopaedic Surgery

Professor and Vice Chairman
Department of Orthopaedic Surgery
Stanford University School of Medicine

Chief, Pediatric Orthopaedic Surgery
Lucile Packard Children's Hospital Stanford
(effective December 1, 2016)

300 Pasteur Drive Edwards Bldg R105
Stanford, CA
(650) 723-5243
sfrick01@stanford.edu

Dr. Steven L. Frick is a pediatric orthopaedic surgeon at Stanford University and current Pediatric Orthopaedic Society of North America President. He was the founding Chairman of the Department of Orthopaedic Surgery at Nemours Children's Hospital in Orlando from 2012-2016, where he also served as Surgeon-in-Chief and Chairman of the Department of Surgery. A native of Greenville, South Carolina, he graduated from The George Washington University and received his medical education at the Medical University of South Carolina. He completed orthopaedic surgery residency and a basic science research fellowship at Carolinas Medical Center in Charlotte NC, and a fellowship in pediatric orthopaedic surgery at Children's Hospital San Diego. His academic interests include clubfoot and foot/ankle disorders, trauma, hip dysplasia, growth. Leadership, professionalism, and graduate medical education.