For Exceptional Service to Stanford University

The Kenneth M. Cuthbertson Award recognizes exceptional contributions of all types to Stanford University. The Award, which is open to all members of the Stanford community, is to recognize extraordinary contributions to the achievement of the goals of the University. Such contributions might be, for example, unusually distinguished service to the University, uncommon ingenuity in meeting University objectives, or exceptional intelligence, diligence, and sensitivity in discharging responsibilities. Ordinarily, one award is made each year.

Kenneth M. Cuthbertson Award 2015

For 22 years of exceptional creativity and strong leadership of the Stanford University Libraries, bringing it into the digital age and developing it into one of the premier facilities in the world;

For pioneering new paths as the Director of Academic Information Resources, while continuing to develop the library's superb collections;

For his clear commitment to scholarly publishing, exemplified in his founding of HighWire Press and ongoing support of Stanford University Press;

For understanding the hybrid nature of today's university research libraries, overseeing the transition to technologically state-of-the-art resources where feasible, while ensuring the availability of works unlikely to be digitized in the near future;

For his innovative and collaborative support of Academic Computing and undergraduate teaching programs; and

For keeping the university's mission and the needs of Stanford's faculty, graduate students and undergraduates first and foremost in mind;

Awarded June 2015 to

Michael A. Keller

Ida M. Green University Librarian, Director of Academic Information Resources, Founder of HighWire Press, and Publisher of the Stanford University Press is hereby designated the 2015 recipient of the
